The Folk Community lost a great musician and friend in November 2022. Mariide Widman devoted her life to her family, music, and sense of humanity and fair play. Truly a self-made and capable woman with a strong voice, she overcame incredible hardships with compassion in service to people and justice. She honed her musical skills in Seattle's coffee houses and clubs that nurtured the folk movement during the 1960s to 1970s and hosted open mic sessions at the Last Exit. She has performed at the NW Folklife Festival since the 1980s and contributed to last year's sing-alongs. Since the late 70s, Mariide joined with others and made sea shanties and sea songs popular as an ongoing genre. Mariide busked for many years on Seattle's streets where she performed her own songs that engaged the psyches of her audiences and was a regular at the Seattle Song Circle.
